Environment Analysis – Audio Spectrograms

Spectrographic analyses of sound recordings taken at the site showcase the complex auditory relationships between animal type and species negotiated through tightly controlled vocal frequency usage.

Several individual calls can be picked out and isolated, showing that the sonic field has decent separation and isn't crowded with noise that jams the fauna from communicating.

